Coming of War Notes

1.) In 1803, France and Great Britain were at war and both passed laws to stop American merchant ships from trading with the other. In addition, both allowed their navies to capture American ships to search for war supplies. The British took it one step further. What were the British looking for as they boarded American ships in the early 1800's?

A.)

2.) Needing to decide between war and an embargo, Jefferson urged Congress to pass the Embargo Act in 1807, banning all trade with foreign countries. He hoped this would serve as punishment for France and Great Britain. What was real result of the Embargo Act of 1807?

3.) In the early 1800's, The Treaty of Greenville and Jay's Treaty were both being disregarded by native groups and the British. Although his attempts at uniting various native groups against the U.S. was destroyed in the Battle of Tippecanoe, what Shawnee chief gained British backing in an attempt to halt settlers in the old Northwest Territory?

A.)

4.) In 1812, President James Madison urged Congress to vote for war with Great Britain. When Congress did, the War Hawks (congressional members calling for war) won. List at least two reasons why the War Hawks wanted war with Great Britain.
